

Gaming @ IU LAN War - Acceptable Use Agreement

Introduction

Access to the Indiana University network is based on your need for access and your assent to use IU information technology resources appropriately. These resources are integral to the operation of the university. Security and privacy laws and other institutional policies are in place to protect these services and university information.

Therefore, before you can be granted access, you must read and agree to follow these acceptable usage standards, and must accept responsibility to preserve the security and confidentiality of information that you may access in the course of your use of the university network.

Read the information below carefully. The following points detail your responsibilities as a user of the university network.

You agree to:

- Use your network access only to participate in the Gaming @ IU LAN War event
- Respect the university's information and system security safeguards and procedures (i.e., never attempt to circumvent or "go around" security processes).
- Respect and comply with all copyrights and license agreements.
- Never share your passphrase or network access.
- Never use your access to harass, libel, or defame others.
- Never damage equipment, software, or data belonging to others.
- Never make unauthorized use of computer accounts, access codes, or devices.
- Never monitor or disrupt the communications of others..
- Never use your access to view or distribute child pornography.
- Never cause community or shared resources to be inaccessible or unusable.
- Use shared information technology resources efficiently.
- Avoid overuse of network bandwidth, information storage space, printing facilities, paper, processing capacity, or other shared information technology resources.
- Never send mass email (i.e. unsolicited bulk email or spam) without appropriate approval.
- Never send or respond to chain email.
- Abide by applicable laws in your use of the IU network.
- Report unauthorized access to, inadequate protection of, and inappropriate use of the network immediately to the campus it-incident@iu.edu .

WARNING: Unauthorized distribution of copyrighted material using Indiana University's information technology resources -- including sharing copyrighted music, movies, and software through peer-to-peer applications like Limewire, BitTorrent, MP3Rocket, Frostwire, etc. using Internet access provided by IU -- is against the law and university policy. In addition to sanctions the university may impose, unlawful file sharing may subject you to legal penalties. This includes both civil penalties (having to pay money to the copyright holder in a lawsuit) and criminal penalties (fines and jail time).

See <https://protect.iu.edu/cybersecurity/safeonline/filessharing> for further information.

Sanctions

Failure to comply with these standards will be dealt with seriously, and may result in sanctions relating to your use (and future use) of information or IT resources (such as suspension or termination of access, or removal of online material); to your employment (up to and including immediate termination of employment, in accordance with applicable university policy); to your studies within the university (such as student discipline in accordance with applicable university policy). Illegal acts involving IU information or IT resources may also be subject to prosecution by state or federal authorities and may result in civil or criminal liability.

Indiana University may suspend or block your use of the network without notice when it reasonably appears necessary to do so in order to protect the integrity, security, and functionality of university or other computing resources, or to protect the university from liability. The university may also refer suspected violations of applicable law to appropriate law enforcement agencies.
